G&Tea

Gin was unheard of in England until the 'Glorious Revolution', when William of Orange was crowned King of England in 1688. William came from Holland, the home of juniper flavoured spirits.

In the 1830s the distillation process was transformed and a much cleaner, smoother gin emerged, with juniper as its definitive flavour. This new style was coined 'London Dry Gin' to differentiate it from the sweeter gin and had refreshing yet fully flavoured qualities. As the gin became more refined, so too did its archetypal drinker. No longer for down-and-outs, gin became the tippie of choice for the discerning London gentry who drank for social pleasure.

Our traditional offering including a Gin & Tonic
